Top 5 to Know About a School Board Outing

- 1. Contact your District Superintendent's office (searchable at www. leavemychildalone.org/supes) to find out when and where your next School Board meeting will be held. Ask your District Superintendent's office how and when community members may submit requests to get a Resolution on the Board's agenda for discussion and vote.
- 2. Research your District's current policy, and more importantly, find out about your District's current implementation of the Opt Out requirements
- 3. Submit your request in advance with an Opt Out Resolution attached
- 4. Arrive a few minutes early, prepared with additional copies of your Opt Out Resolution to distribute to Board members. Bringing a few other students, parents, teachers and others to tell their stories can be very helpful.
- 5. When it is your time to speak, be clear, brief, and constructive. Use a sample statement if it's useful for you: "I was surprised to learn that No Child Left Behind requires districts to release personal student information to military recruiters. I am urging this school board to review and vote on a Resolution committed to protecting family privacy through simple improvements such as: ample parent notification; translation (if applicable); a standalone Opt Out, and requiring the return of the Opt Out form for registration.

What does a school board do?

(With thanks to the Illinois Association of School Boards)

Perhaps the single most important job of a school board is to employ a superintendent and to hold him or her responsible for managing the schools in accordance with state law and the school board's policies. The board also should set educational goals for the schools based upon state laws and community values and see that the superintendent and the total staff vigorously pursue those goals.

Because a school board is a governmental body, it can take action only by majority vote at a public meeting. The individual board member has no authority other than the right to cast a vote at such a meeting...The school board is required to meet in public. Except at time set aside for public input, however, citizens normally do not take part in discussions. Because the school board needs to understand what the community thinks, most boards provide time at meetings for citizens to be heard.

School Board Resolution Protecting Family Privacy

WHEREAS: It is essential that parents and high school students be well-informed of their rights to privacy from military recruiters, in addition to information about the practices of military recruiters and student alternatives to military.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That information about this privacy policy and Opt Out procedures be broadly presented to all high school students in the first weeks of each school semester; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That this organization asks schools to develop a standalone Opt Out card in multiple languages as applicable, with separate check boxes for information release to military recruiters, institutes of higher learning, and employers, to be completed and included in the personnel files of all high school students; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That this organization asks that such a signed card be required from all students as part of their high school registration.

Options to Protect Student Privacy and Ensure Parental Notification

Prominently and clearly place the opt-out notification on all versions (English, Spanish, etc.) of the required Emergency Card. In addition, including a flyer in the registration packet can help to ensure notification. Example language can be found here: http://www.leavemychildalone.org/emergencycard (other versions available upon request).

Emergency card opt-out currently used by districts including:

San Francisco Unified School District Alameda Unified School District Pajaro Valley Unified School District Santa Cruz City High School District Portland School District (Maine)

 Release student directory information to military recruiters ONLY for 11th and 12th graders (unless they opt-out).

Used by many school districts nation-wide, including:

Best Practices for School Districts (PAGE TWO OF TWO)

 Make every reasonable effort to notify students/parents of their right to privacy, including prominently displaying the opt-out option on district and high school websites and in every high school office.

Used by many school districts nationwide, including:New York City Public Schools

 Limit directory information releases to only include the student's name, phone number, and address (do not include ethnicity, clubs, grades, etc.)

Used by many school districts nation-wide, including:

New York City Public Schools Denver Public Schools West Contra Costa Unified School District Santa Cruz City High School District

 Have one opt-out last for a student's entire time in the school/high school district - do not force students to opt-out every year.

Currently used by districts including:

Fresno Unified School District (CA) Evanston Township High School District (IL)

Other Best Practices for Restricting Recruiter Access

Other Possible Options ThatYou May Be Interested In:

- Charge all institutions (including military recruiters) for the costs incurred by the district related to the production of student directory information lists. Currently used by Denver Public Schools and Los Angeles Unified School District.
- Ensure that schools are primarily a safe place for education and that military recruiters receive comparable access to other institutions. Have administrative guidelines for all institutional recruitment visits.
- Castro Valley Unified School District ensures that all recruiters stay in the Career Center and are supervised by staff while on campus
- Madison Metropolitan School District limits all institutional guests to three visits a year.
- Tucson Unified School District limits recruiter access to once a month and have many other visit restrictions. Tucson's administrative guidelines can be found here: http://www.tusd.k12.az.us/contents/adminguidelines/admin001.doc
- Whittier Union High School District does not allow recruiters in classrooms, does not allow recruitment Humvees and is developing a pamphlet for students on how to verify recruiters' claims.
- Pass a resolution showing the board's support for congressional bill H.R. 551, introduced by Mike Honda, which would change the No Child Left Behind Act to ONLY release student directory information with parental consent (what we call an 'opt-in' policy). Go to www.leavemychildalone.org/petition for more information about H.R. 551.

Dear Parent,

When Congress passed the No Child Left Behind Act (NCLB) in 2001, they included a provision that requires high schools to release students' private information to military recruiters or risk losing federal funding. Under NCLB, public high schools must give military recruiters students' information unless parents "opt out" in writing. Recruiters use this information, which includes names, addresses, and phone numbers to individually recruit students through phone calls and in-person visits.

Top 5 to Know About Military Recruitment

- 1. Enlistment & Stop Loss: While recruiters may tell prospective recruits that they can enlist for four years, first-time enlistees must agree to serve a total of eight years. The military can without consent extend active duty obligations during times of conflict, national emergency, or when directed by the president. "Stop loss" orders, involuntarily extending duty for volunteers in all four branches of the military, are becoming more commonplace as the military works to offset declining enlistment. The important thing to remember about the enlistment contract is that it is only binding on the enlistee, and is not binding on the military.
- 2. College Tuition: Military marketing materials promise "up to $70,000" in college funding to potential recruits. While 95% of active duty troops sign up for GI Bill tuition benefits, only 8% of these troops receive the full benefit. It is important to note that 43 percent of those who are eligible for funding never receive a penny, though they are required to pay $1200 in annual nonrefundable fees for enrollment. The head of Army recruiting said recently of recruiting promises, "if it is not in writing, it doesn't exist."
- 3. Pay: About 25,000 families of servicemen and women are eligible for food stamps, and 40% of soldiers in the lower ranks face "substantial financial difficulties." In fact, Senate Minority Leader Harry Reid has reported that some of his constituents in Nevada have received applications for food stamps in the orientation packet for new recruits. Job training in specific areas of interest is another part of the sales package to potential recruits. In fact, anecdotal evidence suggests that many young people who can't afford college enlist with the hopes of receiving special training as engineers, medics, etc. However, there are no guarantees that an enlistee's requested line of training will be available and many end up in infantry jobs.

Top 5 to Know About Military Recruitment (PAGE TWO OF TWO)

- 4. Parents & High Schools: According to U.S. Army Lt. Col. Daoust, access to high schools slows down escalating costs of recruiting soldiers in a time of war. Under immense pressure to make high monthly quotas of enlistees, recruiters turn first and foremost to the high schools. "High schools are the recruiter's life blood," says former Marine recruiter and Gulf War veteran Jim Massey. In many schools, recruiters also gain valuable knowledge and contact with students through the administration of the ASVAB test the Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery. This is pitched to schools and students as a free career exploration program, but the Army Recruiting Manual states it is "specifically designed to provide the recruiter with concrete and personal information about the student." Facing these tactics, families should realize their power as what the military calls "influencers." As one Ohio recruiter said in the New York Times, "parents are the biggest hurdle we face."
- 5. Recruiting Budget & Techniques: The overall military recruiting budget jumped to $4 billion annually, with an unprecedented $1 billion Army advertising budget. Ads, web marketing, promotions and direct mail target both parents and students, and include such shockers as military ads running daily on Channel One in middle school classrooms. Extensive focus group research (see www. JAMRS.com) helps shape a message on character building and pride for parents, and on travel, college, money and independence for students. The development of multimedia recruitment tools such as M-16 Rifle Simulators, "Army Cinema Vans," and mobile rockclimbing walls combine with online military games, free T-shirts, X-Box games, and hats to help engage kids on campus. Promotional sponsorships by the military of NASCAR teams, Pro Stock Bike teams, rodeo stars, Air Force IMAX movies and other sophisticated "imagemakers" use tax dollars to reinforce the appeal of military service. In addition, recruiters receive professional training in telemarketing skills and salesmanship, and use demographic targeting to identify likely target schools and prospective recruits.
